We invite you to nominate individuals or organizations for their accomplishments referring the guidelines we have enclosed. We are looking forward to receiving your nominations.

In the Arts and Cultural Exchange category, we particularly welcome nominations from fields that have not seen many awardees in the past, such as pop culture, architecture, design, and sports.

In addition, we have made the following changes from 2025 to allow us to accept more nominations than ever before:

- In order to continually review valuable nominations, we have decided to make nominations eligible for selection for three consecutive fiscal years from the date of nomination.
- From the "Ineligible individuals and/or organizations," we have excluded "Organizations that are closely related, organizationally or financially, to their nominator" and "Individuals and organizations whose main activities are profit-making."

◆ SHIOTA Chiharu (Artist) [Japan]

SHIOTA Chiharu is a Berlin-based artist who is active internationally and who creates works that explore the fundamental theme of "life and death." A work she made while studying in Germany in 1997, which employed her own body as a component of the work, marked her starting point as an artist. As exemplified by works such as "Memories of Skin," a work composed of gigantic dresses coated in mud that she presented at the Yokohama Triennale in 2001, and "During Sleep," a work involving 30 beds that she showed at Switzerland's Museum of Art Lucerne in 2002, Shiota's works hint at "life and death," and as such they have been greeted with astonishment by large numbers of viewers. Shiota continues to show a large number of her distinctive works in countries around the world, and in particular "The Key in the Hand," a work in which tens of thousands of keys were connected with a mass of red threads, which she presented at the International Art Exhibition - La Biennale di Venezia, won high praise for carrying a powerful visual impact and unifying the wishes or memories of people. Shiota's activities put international exchange into practice, and she has also emerged as a driving force encouraging women to flourish internationally. Against the backdrop of this extensive and remarkable track record, we expect Shiota to continue to make great strides in the future also, and accordingly, we believe she is a worthy recipient of the Japan Foundation Award.

◆ Association of Japanese Language Teachers of Mongolia [Mongolia]

The Association of Japanese Language Teachers of Mongolia has been making major contributions to the development and popularization of Japanese language education throughout Mongolia. Beginning with the establishment in 1975 of a Japanese language course offered by the National University of Mongolia's Department of Literature, Japanese language education has spread widely from elementary school education through to higher educational institutions in Mongolia. The Association, which was established in 1993, currently boasts 363 members and holds Japanese language speech contests and education symposiums in partnership with local Japan-related institutions and other entities. Furthermore, since 2000 the Association has been active as the implementing agency for the Japanese-Language Proficiency Test, and it has also been focusing efforts on developing and popularizing the "Nihongo Dekirumon" series of educational materials for elementary and secondary education based on the JF Standard for Japanese-Language Education, and is working to popularize the Standard. It holds a diverse range of Japanese language education-related events every year, and is endeavoring to enhance the level of Japanese language education. We chose to present the Japan Foundation Award to the Association in expectation of its increased activity and development in the future.

◆ The Sainsbury Institute for the Study of Japanese Arts and Cultures (SISJAC) [U.K.]

The Sainsbury Institute for the Study of Japanese Arts and Cultures (SISJAC) is a research institution that was founded in 1999 through the financial support of Sir Robert and Lady Sainsbury to promote research, publication and exchanges relating to Japanese arts and cultures, and it is currently evolving as one of the largest research institutions relating to these fields in Europe. Thus far a large number of fellows and visiting researchers from around the world, including Japan, have been enrolled at the Institute, and number over 90 since its founding. Furthermore, as a result of its educational partnership with the University of East Anglia, it has also set up an MA in Interdisciplinary Japanese Studies course. Its library boasts a collection of over 50,000 historical records, and it is currently moving to digitalize them. In recent years the Sainsbury Institute for the Study of Japanese Arts and Cultures has also been displaying flexibility by expanding its areas of interest to include archaeology, manga, anime and other topics, and in this and other ways the Institute promises to be immensely active as a core institution of Japanese research in Europe from here on also. Accordingly, we consider it worthy of being awarded the Japan Foundation Award.
